Aid in India

Active in India since 1998, Intervita works in the city of Pune, just 180 Km from Bombay, in the state of Maharashtra. It focuses primarily on development projects and is able to assist over 95 thousand families and children.

Emergency Earthquake Aid

Since the early hours of December 27th u.s., Intervita went into action with its own local teams, offering humanitarian aid to regions hit by the seaquake.

Since January 2nd c.a., after surveying the affected areas, efforts have been concentrated toward Muttom, a fishing village roughly 40 Km from Kanniyakumari in the state of Tamil Nadu, where humanitarian aid was yet to arrive.

Local Background

Muttom has a population of roughly 10,000 people, 20% of whom lost everything in the disaster. Thousands of families are homeless, and hundreds still cannot find their loved ones. Much of the population of Muttom relied on fishing, but the seaquake disrupted all means to generate income.

Number of those who currently receive aid: roughly 2,000 people.

Aid Operations

The Intervita team consists of medics and engineers who lend their skills chiefly to medical assistance and the distribution of various commodities: food, water, soap, cans to collect water, candles, clothes, footwear for children, etc...

Intervita, in collaboration with the Indian government, has prepared 3 shelter centres and is currently the only organization of its kind delivering relief to the area's population.

The shelter centre - run in collaboration with Intervita - hosts 430 families, made up of the roughly 2,000 people who survived the tsunami, but lost their homes and all personal goods to the disaster.

Medical and surgical dispensaries are already up and running at the 3 shelter centres, where families can be visited, cared after, and receive psychological counseling.

Since January 2nd, Intervita has been supplying commodities indispensable to the survival of those hosted by the shelter centres, in an effort to help them gradually regain normality in their everyday lives.

Made possible from January 2nd - 31st, 2005 - due especially to the Corradi Foundation - was the distribution of the following items: candles, mattresses, biscuits, powdered milk, kerosene stoves, toothpaste, toothbrushes, towels, rubber sandals, etc.

Intervita's assistance in Mutton continues, as the needs of the population are many. Its first aim is to quickly begin the reconstruction phase.
